

LISTING of
SPACED and/or PRORATED
OIL & GAS FIELDS UNDERGOING PRIMARY RECOVERY IN KANSAS

[Alphabetical by County]

USER PREFACE

Areas of Kansas selectively described in this document have been (strictly for purposes of clarity and nomenclature consistency) named in accordance with the title of each particular spacing/proration order governing each such area/field. These names may or may not agree with the field names assigned by the Nomenclature Committee to the same geographical area, as they are charged with doing by the Conservation Division's general, statewide regulation K.A.R. 82-3-102.

All counties not appearing in this Summary have no KCC-issued spacing/proration orders governing the reservoirs lying within their borders. All well-spacing in those counties is spelled out in the General Rules and Regulations for the Conservation of Crude Oil and Natural Gas.

Exceptions to the well-spacing provisions contained within any particular spacing/proration order can be awarded after petitioning the Commission directly for said exceptions. Many of these orders already contain criteria for the more-or-less automatic granting of an exception to the mandated well-spacing if no protests against the exercising of such exception are registered by any offset operators and/or offset, unleased mineral owners.

Users are expected to take note of the nature of each identified common source-of-supply alluded to in the body of an order as to whether said common source-of-supply is a dry gas reservoir, a crude oil reservoir lacking significant quantities of associated natural gas, or a combination reservoir able to support both exclusive production of crude oil and/or production of any combination of both oil and natural gas.

Completed wells which, by their very nature, contrast with the classification of the hydrocarbon accumulation controlled by the order are presumed to be immune from regulation by the spacing/proration order unless and until the Commission changes the wording contained within said order so as to make the order applicable to the contrasting type of well(s).

Any orders carried in this listing which contain "sunset clauses" by which those orders will automatically terminate of their own accord on or after a prescribed date without further intervention on the part of the Commission and which may happen to still be inadvertently appearing in this document (as though they were still effective and in force) can and should be disregarded as being binding upon the reader.

All areas formerly controlled by a self-terminating spacing/proration order that has ceased to be considered effective and in force shall revert back to the well-spacing and daily production constraints set forth in the General Rules and Regulations for the Conservation of Crude Oil and Natural Gas, unless otherwise stated. Such reversion shall not be construed to mean that active wells previously drilled and completed under the spacing terms and provisions set forth in the terminated order automatically surrender some portion of or the sum total of whatever acreage had previously been unitized for those wells under the terms of the defunct order. Contact a member of the Conservation Division's staff to find out more about the subsequent consequences surrounding removal of spacing restrictions that had formerly required the creation of spacing units of a certain size and shape.

Hard copies of the full text version of any order still in effect and being carried within this listing are available upon request from the Central Office in Wichita, KS. Interested parties need to be aware of the possibility of the existence of supplemental amendments (published separate from the Basic Order) that may not have been incorporated (via later revision) into the original Basic Order. Without said amendments, the areal descriptions contained herein of the tracts controlled by the well-spacing provisions won't agree with the geographic descriptions contained within the bodies of the Basic Orders.

Copies of such amendments will be provided upon request whenever possible.

Finally, recompletion of older wells existing within a regulated area into a pay zone that is controlled by one of the spacing/proration orders carried in this Summary is presumed to put that recompleted well under the control of the order. All operators contemplating making such a change to an older well are expected to factor in this possible consequence of their actions and to check on the possible existence of spacing/proration orders that might impact the well's production profile in a negative manner (because of not conforming to the prescribed well-spacing pattern) some time prior to their performing the workover that will result in recompletion.

Counties are listed in alphabetical order by name. Maps of these various spaced/prorated areas aren't available from the KCC. Similarly, open hole logs of discovery wells that led to the issuance of any one of the orders being summarized in this county-by-county listing are not available from the KCC. Conservation Division staff assumes no responsibility nor any liability for misunderstandings, erroneous conclusions, and/or losses of prospect-leasing susceptibility or in financial value of a drilling prospect arising from either the use, the future editing, or the downloading of this document.
